There is an absolute smorgasbord of reality television to choose from these days, and performance competitions make up a large percentage of the most watched. It seems like we can't get enough of shows like "American Idol," "The Voice" and "America's Got Talent," but there's one such series that sets itself apart from the rest.

Season 3 of "The Masked Singer" premieres Sunday, Feb. 2, on Fox, right after Super Bowl LIV, and the new installment of this simultaneously strange and beautiful series promises to be bigger and better than ever. Series host Nick Cannon ("Berserk" 2019) returns along with the previous seasons' judges: actors Ken Jeong ("The Casagrandes") and Jenny McCarthy ("Return of the Mac") are back on the panel with musicians Robin Thicke and Nicole Scherzinger. This time around, there are 18 new masked mystery celebrities — more than any season so far.

Unlike most performance competitions, "The Masked Singer" does not recruit previously unknown talents to vie for a prize. In this reality series, it's celebrities who face off against one another for fan votes, and each episode features spectacular musical performances. The catch is that the celebrities are wearing elaborate costumes that conceal their identities. Referred to only by the name of their costume, a contestant is not unmasked until they are voted off of the show, and despite Nick Cannon's shouts of "I knew it!" and hints given throughout, the final reveal is always a shock.

The man or woman behind the mask could be anyone. The Season 1 contestant known as The Raven turned out to be talk show host Ricki Lake, and last season's Ice Cream and Thingamajig shocked audiences when they revealed themselves to be professional video gamer Tyler "Ninja" Blevins and NBA star Victor Oladipo, respectively. While some of the masked singers are recording artists by trade — such as the Empress of Soul, Gladys Knight, who took third place in Season 1, and last season's high-ranking competitors Patti LaBelle, Seal and runner-up Chris Daughtry — most are taking a leap, amazing judges, fans and even themselves with their vocal chops. Simply imagining the celebs that could appear on the upcoming season of "The Masked Singer" is fun — and imagining is all we can do. Series producers have said that a mere 25 people actually know the identities of the contestants before the big reveals.

Musical mystery: Season 3 of 'The Masked Singer' premieres after Super Bowl LIV

Nick Cannon hosts "The Masked Singer"

The story behind the series is a good one. Sometime in 2018, Smart Dog Media (a reality television production company) CEO Craig Plestis became distracted, as we all so often are, by the TV while dining out in Thailand. Looking around, Plestis noticed that most of the guests had abandoned both their conversations and their meals in favor of watching the weird program airing on the television. It featured a "crazy kangaroo in a pleather outfit" dancing around on stage and singing. Entranced by what he had seen (and the other diners' reactions to it), Plestis and his dining companions didn't even finish their food before beginning to research the series.

He discovered that the program originated in South Korea in 2015 as "King of Mask Singer" (or the much more fun literal translation, "Mystery Music Show: Masked Singer's King"). By the time Plestis saw it for the first time, the show had already become a franchise, expanding to China, Indonesia, Vietnam and, of course, Thailand.

As culture and values vary across the globe, so does the approach to television. Although American media dominates the airwaves in most of the English-speaking world, most people are able to spot shows that don't originate in the U.S. for multiple reasons, perhaps without even knowing why. Even muted, shows that come from across the pond can be identified by many people, thanks to technological differences that cause film to relay and display differently on screen (you can research the American color encoding system NTSC vs. the British system PAL for more insight).

Those who are used to the ultra-HD, high-contrast look of American films might describe the look of British shows like "Doctor Who" and "Coronation Street" as slightly hazy or dream-like. But sometimes it's the content of a series that betrays its origins, as is the case with "The Masked Singer." Take one look at the utterly glorious absurdity that is this show, and it evokes the same distinctly non-American feelings that other adaptations are known for — consider the dry humor of Britain's "The Office," the interests of the titular character in Venezuelan series "Jane the Virgin" and the over-the-top costuming and acting in Japan's "Power Rangers."

Poaching plotlines from series abroad can lead to massive success stories, which "The Masked Singer" exemplifies perfectly. Fox's adaptation of "The Masked Singer" has done so well, in fact, that this year the franchise is expanding to more than 10 additional countries, from Austria to South Africa.

If Super Bowl LIV hasn't left you with a giant hole on your television screen, or too excited to sit still, you can tune in to find out which celebrity will be joining rapper T-Pain and comedian Wayne Brady as "Kings" when reality's most unbelievable competition series, "The Masked Singer," returns for a third season beginning Sunday, Feb. 2, on Fox.

Doctor Sleep

In a sleepy New Hampshire town, a grown-up Danny Torrance, who now goes by Dan (McGregor), continues to struggle with the lasting psychological impact of his childhood stay at the Overlook Hotel, where his father changed his life forever. Working in a hospice, Dan is consumed by his "shining" and angry ghosts from his past as he tries to comfort dying patients. When Dan begins to receive telepathic communications from a young woman named Abra Stone (Curran), who has a "shining" more powerful than his own, the two must work together to protect innocent children from a cult of psychic vampires.

Director: Mike Flanagan. Stars: Ewan McGregor, Kyliegh Curran, Cliff Curtis, Zahn McClarnon, Emily Alyn Lind. 2019. 152 mins. Horror.

The show is based on the series of novels of the same name by Stephan Pastis, and follows Timmy Failure (Winslow Fegley, "Fast Layne"), an 11-year-old boy living in the shadow of the water tower in Portland, Oregon, with his mother, Patty (Ophelia Lovibond, "Elementary"). Believing himself to be the best detective in town, Timmy runs his own agency (Total Failure Inc.), solving cases with the help of his sidekick, Rollo Tookus (newcomer Kei), and his partner, Total, who is a 1,500-pound polar bear. Much to the dismay of his mother and his therapist (Craig Robinson, "The Office"), Timmy gets into all sorts of antics as he takes on his newest case: the theft of the Failure Mobile (a Segway Patty won at a church raffle). WHAT'S NEW ON CBS ALL ACCESS

"Interrogation"

On Thursday, Feb. 6, follow a 30-year investigation in this new true crime series that lets viewers take the reins. Based on the real-life case of a man who was charged with the vicious murder of his mother, showrunners used the real case files to create nine episodes, each focusing on different interrogations that took place throughout the investigation, and Peter Sarsgaard ("The Looming Tower") stars as the lead detective. With the first nine episodes being released all at once, the series is intended to be watched in no particular order, creating the feel of an actual investigation and putting viewers in the position of detective by choosing which interrogation to watch next. Choose your own adventure as you follow this thrilling case with the dramatic finale premiering at a later date.

Follow Nick as he faces all manner of beasts that will change everything you thought you knew about fairytales in all six seasons of this drama, available now.

BINGE ON HULU

"Will & Grace"

There are many extremely popular New York City-based sitcoms, but few were as groundbreaking and beloved as the critically acclaimed series "Will & Grace." The series focuses on the two eponymous characters: Grace Adler (Debra Messing, "Smash") is a neurotic and emotional interior designer, who is balanced out perfectly by her gay best friend and roommate, Will Truman (Eric McCormack, "Travelers"), a level-headed lawyer. The two are joined by their friends Karen Walker (Megan Mullally, "Childrens Hospital"), Grace's rich, alcoholic assistant, and Jack McFarland (Sean Hayes, "Sean Saves the World"), a flamboyantly gay actor, as they face the ups and downs of life, from various romantic relationships to dealing with work, family, friends and stereotypes. This hilarious series is known for having shone a positive light on the LGBT community in the early aughts and for using comedy to touch on difficult, topical themes. Eleven years after its 2006 finale, the cast reunited to urge the American public to vote, and that video resulted in the series being picked up for a four-season reboot. All eight original seasons of "Will & Grace" are available to binge now.

Peter Sarsgaard stars in "Interrogation"

Connor Jessup and Emilia Jones in "Locke & Key"
